Open up new retail opportunities with FUJITSU Market Place

The convergence of the digital world with the physical one carries the potential to transform all our lives.

Our vision is a world where knowledge is continually harnessed to drive new value and support sustainable growth. We call it the Human Centric Intelligent Society and it is in the retail sector that this revolution is already becoming a reality.

The retail revolution

The key challenge for retailers has always been how to sell more and how to sell better. In a major Fujitsu study<sup>1</sup>, 63% of retailers told us that increasing the average sale per customer is their number one focus.

This comes at a time when the retail sector is experiencing the biggest upheaval in its history.

The analyst prediction:

Changing customers

Customers now expect a seamless, personal and more mobile shopping experience whenever they choose to engage with a brand – from the physical store environment to the digital sphere.

Changing workflows

Big Data, analytics and cloud technologies have created new expectations – both for customers and internal teams seeking to raise sales revenues through new forms of retailing

Changing business

Competition from all quarters has intensified with the shift towards local to global retailing. Meanwhile, shifting demographics are shifting spending patterns.

Internally, the impact is no less significant. Today's retailers are still operating in channel silos, where data and transactions are kept separate. For example, just because a retailer has a mobile e-commerce platform, it does not mean that e-commerce data is integrated with the information gathered by in-store PoS terminals.

In many cases, the problem has been that there was no single view of the customer. Without that, how could retailers ever hope to sell more and sell better in a changing retail environment?

At Fujitsu we have developed the answer: FUJITSU Market Place.
