Banish the hidden cost of clutter

Just sit down and think

In their bid to stay competitive in an uncertain digital economy, organizations know they have to keep staff motivated and productive – and a bright, spacious workspace with state-of-the-art equipment can make a huge difference. However, many office workspaces fail to live up to the organization's promises, because they are simply not designed to inspire. Desks are cluttered, with inadequate personal space, and certainly no room to gather people round. Cables trail across every surface to connect whatever devices are needed at the time. Display and desk heights cannot be adjusted. The result: more distraction, more time spent searching for things, and less well-being.

What's needed is a workspace that is ready for an economy in which value chains are almost completely digital – with every element designed to inspire and adapt to users and new digital working styles.

→ Fujitsu Clean Desk 2.0: the clean workspace for the new digital economy
